Samāsa

Tappurisasamāsa

Definition

- in general
  - visesana-visesya: compound formed from a qualifier and a qualified term
- excluding kammadhāraya and digu
  - 2nd meaning is predominant: meaning of 2nd term (visesya) is predominant
  - bhinnādhikaraṇe: they don't have the same referent
  - amādayo parapadehi (kcyn): visesana bears a case ending beginning with the accusative (aṃ ādi (any other than paṭhamā), leading to 6 types
- e.g.:
  - tassa puriso tappuriso (his man)
- notes:
  - includes kammadhāraya and digu as subtypes
  - called Dependant Determinative Compound

1. Kammadhāraya and Digu vs. Tappurisa [

| | kammadhāraya | digu | tappurisa |
|---|---|---|---|
| visesana & visesya | tulyādikaraṇa | tulyādikaraṇa | bhinnādhikaraṇa |
| vibhatti | both paṭhamā | both paṭhamā | 1st aṁādi1st ≠ from 2nd |

   - kammadhāraya and digu:
     - visesana and visesya are tulyādikaraṇa (in apposition; having the same referent)
     - paṭhamāvibhatti is used in both members

- tappurisa:
  - bhinnādhikaraṇa: don't refer to the same thing
  - adj (1st member) can have any vibhatti other than paṭhamā
  - vibhatti of the qualifier is ≠ from that of the qualified

6 types

[ acc. to the vibhatti of the first term:

- dutiyā tappurisa (accusative tappurisa)
  - araññaṁ gato arañña gato (one who has gone to the forest)
- tatiyā tappurisa (instrumental tappurisa
  - buddhena bhāsito buddhabhāsito (the dhamma spoken by the buddha)
- catutthī tappurisa (dative tappurisa)
  - kaṭhinassa dussaṃ kaṭhinadussaṃ (cloth intended for the kaṭhina robe)
- pañcamī tappurisa (ablative tappurisa)
  - corato bhayaṃ corabhayaṃ (fear arising from thieves)
- chaṭṭhī tappurisa (genitive tappurisa)
  - rañño putto rājaputto (the king's son)
  - tassa puriso (ta + purisa) tappuriso (his man)
- sattamī tappurisa (locative tappurisa)
  - vikāle bhojanaṃ vikālabhojanaṃ (eating at an improper time)
- notes:
  - paṭhamā tappurisa (kammadhāraya and digu): 1st member bears the nominative case
  - also
    - amādiparatappurisa
    - aluttatappurisa

Gender, Number, and Declension

[ Determined by the 2nd term

- e.g.: araññagata
  - purisādigaṇa declension
    - when referring to a single man: araññagato (m. sg.)
    - when referring to many men: araññagatā (m. pl.)
  - kaññādigaṇa declension
    - when referring to a single woman: araññagatā (f. sg.)
  - etc.
- notes:
  - abhidheyya: the meaning denoted by a word

Viggaha

- look at the meaning of the samāsa
  - e.g.: tappurisa (his man)
- determine the case ending that has been omitted from the qualifier
  - e.g.: chaṭṭhīvibhattī
- place the qualifier in that case
  - e.g.: tassa
- place the qualified in the nominative
  - e.g.: puriso
- final: tassa puriso tappuriso

Kitanta Upapada Samāsa

[ kitanta tappurisa / kitanta samāsa / upapadasamāsa: compound in which

- upapada: the 1st member is an upapada (close word): preceding noun
- kitaka: ends in a kitaka that cannot occur by itself
- niccasamāsa: always occurs in the compounded form, never as 2 separate words
- e.g.: kammakāro (one who does work; worker)
  - kamma (upapada) kar + ṇa (kitaka); NOT kammaṁ kāro
- notes:
  - mostly found in tappurisa
  - gato (kitaka): can occur by itself, so saraṇagato is not kitanta

1. Kitanta Upapada Viggaha [
   - assapada viggaha: uses a substitute word since the kitaka cannot be by itself
   - kitakaviggahas always use verbs
   - e.g.:
     - kammaṃ karotīti kammakāro (one who does work; worker)
       - kamma (upapada) + kara + ṇa (kitaka)
       - NOT kammaṁ kāro kammakāro (not a verb)
       - NOT kammaṁ kārako kammakāro (not a verb)
     - kumbhaṃ karotīti kumbhakāro (one who makes pots; potter)
     - alaṁ karotīti alaṅkāro (one who makes beauty)
     - atthaṃ kāmetīti atthakāmo (one who desires benefit)
     - dhammaṃ kāmetīti dhammakāmo (one who desires the Dhamma)
     - dhammaṃ dhāretīti dhammadharo (one who bears or retains the Dhamma)
     - vinayaṃ dhāretīti vinayadharo (one who bears or retains the Vinaya)

    - also in kammadhāraya

- rāja as second member: may decline as rāja or, if -a is added, as purisa
  - devānaṁ rājā devarājā / devarājo (king of the gods)
    - Sometimes the compound receives the suffix -a mentioned earlier in examples such as dvirattaṁ
    - the body"; guṇasambandha),
    - rukkhamūlaṁ ("the vicinity of a tree"; literally, 'the root/base of a tree'; samīpasambandha)
    - Ayassa patto → ayopatto ("an iron bowl"; vikārasambandha)
    - Pānīyathālakaṁ ("a water vessel; water bowl")
    - Sappikumbho ("a jar of ghee")
    - The last two examples illustrate relationships of container and contents.
      - 16 In this example, ācariyassa ("the teacher") is the object (kamma) of pūjako ("worshipper").

However, as learned in the Kāraka Chapter, the object of a word ending in the suffix -aka is expressed in the genitive case. Therefore, it is written in the genitive as ācariyassa. Although the meaning is that of an object (kammattha), the grammatical case is the genitive. Since the determining factor is the case ending rather than the semantic role, this is still a chaṭṭhī tappurisa compound.

Then it declines like a regular a-stem masculine noun (purisa): devarājo, devarājā, devarājaṁ, devarāje, etc. The same suffix may also be added to sakha, another member of the rājādi class. Thus, from: Devānaṁ sakhā → devasakhā, the compound may decline either: according to the rājādi class: devasakhā, devasakhāno, etc. or, according to the purisādi class: devasakho, devasakhā, etc.

3. Shortening of ī & ū

ī & ū at the end of the first member are often shortened 19

- hatthino padaṁ hatthipadaṁ (elephant's footprint)
- itthiyā rūpaṁ itthirūpaṁ (female form)
- bhikkhuniyā saṅgho bhikkhunisaṅgho (community of nuns)
- jambuyā sākhā jambusākhā (branch of a rose-apple tree)

- sabbaññuno sāsanaṁ sabbaññusāsanaṁ

4. Gamaka Compounds

    - a type of tappurisa
    - not compounded
        - aññamaññ anapekkha (mutually independent): words that, though close to each other, do not compound because they are mutually independent
            - bhaṭo raññ putto devadattassa (the servant of the king is the son of Devadatta)
                - NOT rājaputto
        - aññasāpekkha (dependent on another word): words that, though close to each other, do not compound because they depend on another word
            - devadattassa kaṇhā dantā (the black teeth of Devadatta)
                - NOT devadattakaṇhā
        - gamakasamāsa
            - an aññasāpekkha term may be compounded if the intended meaning can still be clearly understood after compounding
                - devadattassa gurukulaṁ (the family of Devadatta's teacher)
                - devadattassa guruno kulaṁ
                - guru: depends on both:
                - kula (the teacher's family)
                - devadattassa (devadatta's teacher)
                - bhagavato sāvakasaṅgho
                - devadattassa bhaginiputto
                - tassa pādamūlaṁ
    - gamaka: that which makes something understood
    - sāpekkhatte satipi gamakattā samāso – even though dependence exists, compounding occurs because the meaning can still be understood

19 This change takes place according to the Kaccāyana rule "Kvacādimajjhuttarānaṁ dīgharassā paccayesu ca." Under this rule, the long and short vowels occurring at the beginning, middle, or end of certain words are subject to alteration when suffixes or stems are succeeding.

Sattamītappurisasamāsa

1. e.g. [

    - vikāle bhojanaṁ vikālabhojanaṁ (eating at an improper time)
    - rūpe saññā rūpasaññā (perception arising in relation to form)
        - nrtdpn: the word rūpe is an okāsa-kāraka. the essential nature of kāraka meanings is that they involve the occurrence of an action. therefore, even when no verb is explicitly present in such expressions, an implied verbal meaning such as "arising" should be supplied in order to understand the sense correctly. accordingly, rūpasaññā should be understood as: "the perception arising in relation to form." it may also be analysed as a majjhelopī tappurisa compound: rūpe uppannā saññā → rūpasaññā ("perception arisen in form")
    - rūpe (uppannā) sañcetanā rūpasañcetanā (volition arising in relation to form)
    - saṁsāre dukkhaṁ saṁsāradukkhaṁ (suffering existing in saṁsāra)
    - cakkhumhi sannissitaṁ / uppannaṁ viññāṇaṁ cakkhuviññāṇaṁ (consciousness dependent on the eye) (majjhelopī tappurisa)

  - chaṭṭhī / abyayībhāva
    - rattiyā pacchā pacchārattaṁ (the latter part of the night)
  - sattamī
    - pubbe diṭṭho diṭṭhapubbo (one previously seen)
  - sāyanhaṁ (rpsd) / sāyaṇhaṁ (mgln) (the evening part of the day)

1. Prefixes & Particles on the Front

- prefix / particle of the 2nd member moves to the front of the samāsa
- its meaning becomes predominant (resembling abyayībhāva)
  - avyayībhāva: only neuter gender amādipara tappurisa: not only neuter gender
  - avyayībhāva: usually express a quality amādiparatappurisa: may also denote entities (things)
    - upanagaraṁ (being near a city; NOT an actual object near the city)
- e.g.
  - antaṁ atikkantaṁ accantaṁ (that which has gone beyond the end; absolute)
    - 1st member: anta
    - 2nd member: ati
      - moves to the front

  - when they denote a entity (dabba): tappurisa
  - rpsd-ṭ: mainly abyayībhāva to avoid confusion

Alutta Tappurisa Compounds

- Dutiyā Tappurisa
  - • Pabhaṁ karotīti pabhaṅkaro (“one who produces light”)
  - • Amataṁ dadātīti amatandado (“one who gives the Deathless”)
  - • Raṇaṁ jahātīti raṇañjaho (“one who abandons the dust of defilements”)

  - • Jutiṁ dhāretīti jutindharo (“one who bears radiance”)24

    * 24 These four examples are all upapada compounds.

- Tatiyā Tappurisa

  - • Sahasā kataṁ sahasākataṁ (“done hastily or by force”)25

    * 25 The word saha belongs to the manogaṇādi group. (It was not mentioned under the manogaṇādi of Nāma Chapter, since it is rarely found declined as other stems of that group.) Therefore, sahasā is an instrumental form, like manasā (“by mind”), cetasā (“by thought”), and vacasā (“by speech”). If sahasā is regarded as an indeclinable (nipāta), then this is not an alutta tappurisa compound. Rather, it is an ordinary lutta tatiyā tappurisa, since the case ending has been elided.

- Catutthī Tappurisa

  - • Parassa padaṁ parassapadaṁ (“a verbal ending for (referring to) another”)

  - Attano padaṁ attanopadaṁ (“a verbal ending for (referring to) oneself”)26

  - Santikerūpaṁ (“a nearby form”)
  - Antevāsī, Antevāsiko (“a pupil living nearby his teacher”)
  - Sarasijaṁ (“a lotus born in a lake”)27
    - ∗ 27 The words antevāsī, antevāsiko, and sarasijaṁ are upapada samāsa compounds.

Dvandasamāsa

Definition

nāmanaṁ samuccayo dvando (kcyn): compound formed by combining two or more nouns that are not in a qualifier-qualified (visesana-visesya) relationship is called a dvanda samāsa

- sāriputto ca moggallāno ca sāriputtamoggallānā (Ven. Sāriputta and Ven. Moggallāna) ubhayapadatthappadhāno dvando (rpsd): in a dvandva compound, there is no qualifier and qualified; the meanings of both members are equally prominent 1

- ekatthībhāvo samāsalakkhaṇaṁ (oneness of meaning is the (main) characteristic of a compound)
- in dvanda: oneness here is 2 meanings of the 2 words being expressed at the same moment
  - bhante: not satisfying answer
  - me: attha can mean function; maybe they come to have a single function, not meaning

- Chando ca pārisuddhi ca chandapārisuddhi (consent and purity)
- Paṭisandhi ca pavatti ca paṭisandhipavatti (rebirth-linking and continued existence)

Dvanda – Meaning

The word dvandva is formed by combining two occurrences of the word dvi ("two"). A dvandva, in Sanskrit, is anything that occurs in pairs. Thus, a duel between two persons is called a dvandva battle.

In Pāli, the word is dvanda. Its viggaha is: Dve ca dve ca dvandā. Just as the word dvanda is formed from dvi + dvi, all compounds formed by joining two or more coordinate words, such as Sāriputta + Moggallāna, are called Dvandva compounds.

Bahubbīhisamāsa

Definition

aññapadatthesu bahubbīhi (kcyn): expresses the meaning of another word, which is different from the meaning of the two compounded words e.g., āgatā samaṇā imanti āgatasamaṇo (saṅghārāmo) (the monastery to which monks have come)

- āgatā: those who have come
- samaṇā: contemplatives
- imaṁ: monastery (referent)

aññapadatthappadhāno bahubbīhi (rpsd): principal meaning is that of the another word

aka: Relative Compound or Attributive Compound

Bahubbīhi: Meaning

bahavo vīhayo yassa so bahubbīhi: he who has much rice is called bahubbīhi

- bahu + vīhi (much grain)
- yassa: to whom there is much grain

9 Types

- Dvipada-tulyādhikaraṇa
- Dvipada-bhinnādhikaraṇa
- Tipada
- Na-nipāta-pubbapada

- include paṭhamā bahubbīhi
    - Saha-pubbapada
    - Upamāna-pubbapada
    - Saṅkhyobhaya-pada
    - Disantarāḷatta
    - Byatihāra-lakkhaṇa

1. Dvipada-tulyādhikaraṇa Bahubbīhi [ 2 terms in tulyādhikaraṇa e.g. āgatā samaṇā imanti āgatasamaṇo
    - before compounding: both are tulyādikaraṇa (refer to the same referent)
        - āgatā: those (contemplatives) who have come
        - samaṇā: contemplatives
    - after compounding: both refer to a single another referent
        - ima: the place to which the contemplatives have come

        - āgatā samaṇā imanti āgatasamaṇaṁ (jetavanaṁ) (jetavana to which monks have come)

(b) Aññapada [ Word that expresses the referent to which the compound refers

- ya, ta, eta, and ima (/ vā) are usually used in its place so are also called the external word
  - note: in saṅkhyobhayapada bahubbīhi, ”vā” is the external word
- case
  - it is put in any vibhatti except the ālapana
  - depends on the meaning intended

e.g., āgatā samaṇā imaṁ (saṅghārāmaṁ) āgatasamaṇo

- external word: saṅghārāma, ima
- here, dutiyā because it expresses the place to which the monks came

(c) Viggaha of Bahubbīhi Compounds

- put the terms in the nominative case (singular or plural)
  - e.g., āgatā samaṇā
- put the external word (ya, ta, eta, and ima (/ vā)) in the appropriate case followed by ”iti”
  - e.g.,
    - āgatā samaṇā yanti āgatasamaṇo
    - āgatā samaṇā tanti āgatasamaṇo
    - āgatā samaṇā etanti āgatasamaṇo
    - āgatā samaṇā imanti āgatasamaṇo

- optional
  - add referent word after pronoun to clarify its meaning
    - e.g. āgatā samaṇā imaṁ saṅghārāmanti āgatasamaṇo (saṅghārāmo)
  - add ta and ima to express the meaning ”that is” (if so, remove ”iti”)
    - e.g.
      - āgatā samaṇā imaṁ saṅghārāmaṁ, so āgatasamaṇo
      - āgatā samaṇā imaṁ saṅghārāmaṁ, soyaṁ āgatasamaṇo (saṅghārāmo)
      - soyaṁ (so + ayaṁ)
      - sāyaṁ (sā + ayaṁ)
- all forms (4+4+4+4=16):
  - āgatā samaṇā yanti āgatasamaṇo
  - āgatā samaṇā tanti āgatasamaṇo
  - āgatā samaṇā etanti āgatasamaṇo
  - āgatā samaṇā imanti āgatasamaṇo
  - āgatā samaṇā imaṁ saṅghārāmanti āgatasamaṇo (saṅghārāmo)
  - āgatā samaṇā imaṁ saṅghārāmaṁ, so āgatasamaṇo
  - āgatā samaṇā imaṁ saṅghārāmaṁ, soyaṁ āgatasamaṇo (saṅghārāmo)

(d) 6 Types According to Case

acc. to the case of the external word:

- note: paṭhamā bahubbīhi is found in other types like saha-pubbapada
- dutiyā bahubbīhi:

  - āgatā samaṇā imanti āgatasamaṇo (saṅghārāmo) (a monastery to which monks have come)

  - bahavo sāmino asminti bahussāmikaṁ (nagaraṁ) (a city that has many owners)

i. Chaṭṭhī Bahubbīhi

A. More E.g.

- vītarāgo (one whose lust has departed)
- dve padāni assāti dvipado (one who has two feet)
- dvihattho (a cloth two cubits long)
- tevijjo (one who has the three knowledges)
  - ti -> te
- catuppado - “one who has four feet”
- pañcacakkhu (bhagavā) - “the blessed one who has five eyes”
- chaḷabhiññho - “one who has the six higher knowledges” the final vowel of abhiññā is shortened.
- navaṅgaṁ (satthusāsanaṁ) - “the buddhasāsana that has nine divisions”
- dasabalo - “one who has the ten powers”
- anantañāṇo - “one who has infinite knowledge”
- tīṇi dasa etesanti tidasā (devā) - “the gods who have three tens, that is, thirty gods”
- ayaṁ paccayo etesanti idappaccayā - “those things that have this condition, namely resultant dhammas
- ko pabhavo assāti kiṁpabhavo (kāyo) - “what origin does this body have?”
- vigataṁ malamassāti vimalo - “one whose stain has departed; stainless”
- sundaro gandho assāti sugandhaṁ (candanaṁ) - “sandalwood that has a pleasant fragrance”
- susīlo - “one who has good morality”

- sumukho - “one who has a beautiful face”
- sundaraṁ mano assāti sumano (one who has a good mind)
- duṭṭhu mano assāti dummano (one who has a bad mind)

- dummukho - “one who has an ugly face”
- kucchito gandho assāti duggandhaṁ (kuṇapaṁ) - “a corpse that has a bad smell”
- tapo eva dhanaṁ assāti tapodhano - “one whose wealth is ascetic practice itself”
- indoti nāmaṁ etassāti indanāmo - “one whose name is inda”
- kiṁ nāmaṁ assāti kiṁnāmo - “what is his name?”
    - the word kiṁ may be replaced by ko, forming konāmo. this is found in the expression konāmo te upajjhāyo. (rūpasiddhi-bhāsaṭīkā 2, 29)
- dīghā jaṅghā yassāti dīghajaṅgho (puriso) - “a man who has long calves”
    - here, although the first word dīghā is feminine, since it is a word that also occurs in masculine form elsewhere, the feminine suffix is removed. this was explained under kammadhāraya compounds in connection with forms such as khattiyakaññā. the final ā of the second member jaṅghā is also shortened.
- pahūtā jivhā assāti pahūtajivho (bhagavā) - “the blessed one who has a broad tongue”

- mahatī paññā assāti mahāpañño - “one who has great wisdom”

B. Examples Where the Compound-final Suffix -ka Is Added
Saddhā pakati assāti saddhāpakatiko - “one whose nature is faith” Paññāpakatiko - “one whose nature is wisdom”

C. The First Member in Bahubbīhi In a bahubbīhi compound, of the two words being compounded, the qualifier usually comes first.

However, in some compounds such as chandajāta, either of the two words may come first: Chando jāto assāti chandajāto - “one whose desire has arisen” Jāto chando assātipi jātachando - “one whose desire has arisen” Sañjātapītisomanasso/ Pītisomanassasañjāto - “one whose joy and happiness have arisen” Chinnahattho / hatthacchinno - “one whose hands are cut off”

D. The Suffix -ā Added to the End of Bahubbīhi Compounds
In some cases where words such as dhanu occur as the final member, the suffix -ā is added to the end of the compound.

- Gāṇḍīvo dhanu assāti gāṇḍīvadhanvā - “one who has the Gāṇḍīva bow”
  - (gāṇḍīvadhanu + ā)
- Paccakkho dhammo assāti paccakkhadhammā - “one who has directly realized Dhamma” (paccakkhadhamma + ā)
- This does not occur always. Therefore, forms without the suffix -ā, such as paccakkhadhammo and viditadhammo, are also formed.

ii. Sattamī

A. Suffix -ka

Suffix -ka is added to:

- f. ī/ū kāranta
- suffix -tu

e.g.

- bahū nadiyo asminti bahunadiko (janapado) (a region with many rivers)
- bahujambukaṁ (vanaṁ) (a forest with many rose-apple trees)
- bahavo kattāro asmiṁ / assāti bahukattuko (deso) (a country with many doers)
- bahubhattuko (a person with many masters)

iii. Gabbha Bahubbīhisamāsas

Kammadhāraya-tappurisa-gabbha-bahubbīhi-samāsa: bahubbīhi that includes a kammadhāraya and a tappurisa samāsas within it

- nānā-duma-patita-puppha-vāsita-sānu
  - nānappakārā dumā nānā dumā (various kinds of trees) nānā dumā nānādumā

    - byālambambudharabinducumbito kūṭo yassa soyaṁ byālambambudharabinducumbitakūṭo (a mountain whose peak is kissed by raindrops of clouds hanging downward)

∗ chaṭṭhī bahubbīhi

∗ kūṭa: peak, ridge, summit

3 Bahubbīhi compounds are classified into two types: Tagguṇa-saṁviññāṇa and Atagguṇa saṁviññāṇa. Here, guṇa means the qualifier. Since the constituent words of a Bahubbīhi compound qualify the meaning of another (external) word, the constituent words are called qualifiers (guṇa). Saṁviññāṇa means "that which conveys together" (saha + viññāpaka). If the meaning of the external word (aññapada) inherently includes the meaning expressed by the qualifier, the compound is called Tagguṇasaṁviññāṇa. For example: Lambo kaṇṇo yassa so lambakaṇṇo - one who has long ears. Here, the long ears belong to the person. Therefore, the meaning of yassa ("the one who has") inherently includes the meaning of the qualifier, namely, long ears. If the meaning of the external word does not inherently include the meaning expressed by the qualifier, the compound is called Atagguṇasaṁviññāṇa. For example: Bahu dhanaṁ yassāti bahudhano - one who possesses much wealth. Here, the person and the great wealth are two distinct entities. Merely referring to the person does not simultaneously convey the meaning of much wealth. Therefore, this is an Atagguṇa-saṁviññāṇa Bahubbīhi compound.

2. Dvipada-bhinnādhikaraṇa Bahubbīhi

   - each member has a different referent
   - 1 member in paṭhamā, the other in another vibhatti

   e.g.

   - dutiyā
     - ekarattiṁ vāso assāti ekarattivāso (one who has a stay lasting one night)
   - tatiyā
     - samānena vāso assāti samānavāso (one who has dwelling together with a similar person)

- pañcamī
    - ubhato byañjanaṁ assāti ubhatobyañjanako (one who possesses both sexual organs, arisen due to both kammas: the kamma that produces female sexual organ and the kamma that produces male sexual organ)

    - saddhamme gāravo assāti saddhammagāravo (one who has reverence in the (for the) Dhamma)

3. Tipada Bahubbīhi
    - 3 members
    - e.g.
        - parakkamena adhigatā sampadā yehi te parakkamādhigatasampadā (those who possess wealth acquired through great effort)

        - ∗ if adhigatasampadā (acquired wealth) (kammadharaya) is taken as one term, it could be considered a dvipada
        - ∗ yehi/yesaṁ
    - dhammena adhigatā bhogā yehi te dhammādhigatabhogā (those who possess wealth acquired righteously)
    - oṇīto pattato pāṇi yena soyaṁ oṇītapattapāṇi (the Blessed One whose hand is taken out of the bowl)
        - ∗ oṇīta
            - · 1 pp. removed; taken down; lowered [ava + √nī + ta] ~
            - · 2 pp. put into water; washed □
        - ∗ tatiya (yena) / chaṭṭhī (yassa)
    - sīhassa pubbaddhaṁ viya kāyo assāti sīhapubbaddhakāyo (the Blessed One whose body resembles the forepart of a lion)
        - ∗ includes an upamā, so it is also an upamābahubbīhi

4. Na-nipāta Pubbapada Bahubbīhi

”na” is the 1st member

- note: ”na” can be either
    - kammadhāraya (amanusso)
    - bahubbīhi (asamo)
- can be formed with ”natthi” or ”na vijjati”

e.g.

- natthi samo etassāti asamo (bhagavā) (there is no ”his” equal, one who has no equal)

- natthi paṭipuggalo etassāti appaṭipuggalo (there is no ”his” counterpart)
- natthi putto/ā etassāti aputtako (there is no ”his” son)
- natthi hetu etassāti ahetuko (dhammo) (there is no ”its” cause)

- natthi etassa uttaroti anuttaro (one who has no one superior to him)
- natthi anto assāti anantaṁ (that which has no end)
- na vijjanti āsavā etesanti anāsavā (those who have no taints; there are no āsavās for him)
- note: nrtdpn: considers nanipātapubbapada catutthī and sattamī bahubbīhi

5. Saha-pubbapada Bahubbīhi

   - nipāta ”saha” as first member
   - it is a paṭhamābahibbīhi: aññapada is in paṭhamāvibhatti
   - e.g.
     - saha vitakkena yo vattatīti savitakko (a phenomenon associated with initial application)
     - saha hetunā yo vattatīti sahetu / sahetuko (a phenomenon that exists with (accompanied by) a cause)

- sappītiko (a phenomenon together with (accompanied by) pīti)
- sappaccayo (a phenomenon together with conditions)
- saha kilesehi yo vattatīti sakileso (one together with defilements)
- saha upādānehi yo vattatīti saupādāno (one accompanied by clinging)
- saha parivārena yo vattatīti saparivāro (one accompanied by an retinue)
- saha devehi yo vattatīti sadevako (Samārako, Sabrahmako (loko) - the world together with the devas, Māra, Brahmā)

(a) words that become ”sa”

- santa (sappuriso)
- saha (savitakko)
- sabba (sadā)
- samāsa (sajjhukīraṁva muccati)
- saṁ -> sā (sārāgo)

6. Upamāna-pubbapada Bahubbīhi

- 1st member is upamāna (the object of comparison)
- chaṭṭhī / paṭhamā bahubbīhi

e.g. of upamāna pubbapada chaṭṭhī bahubbīhi samāsa

- suvaṇṇavaṇṇo viya vaṇṇo yassa soyaṁ suvaṇṇavaṇṇo (Bhagavā) (the Blessed One who possesses a complexion like the color of gold)
  - suvaṇṇavaṇṇavaṇṇo: suvaṇṇavaṇṇa + vaṇṇa -> suvaṇṇa + vaṇṇa
- nāgassa gati viya gati assāti nāgagati (one who has a gait like that of an elephant)

- sīhagati (one who has a gait like that of a lion)
- sīhassa hanu viya hanu assāti sīhahanu (one who has a jaw like that of a lion)
- sīhassa pubbaddhaṁ viya assa kāyoti sīhapubbaddhakāyo (one who has a body resembling the forepart of a lion)
- brahmuno saro viya saro assāti brahmassaro (one who has a voice like that of Brahmā)

e.g. paṭhamā bahubbīhi (some don't recognize this as bahubbīhi)

- nigrodho iva parimaṇḍalo yo soyaṁ nigrodhaparimaṇḍalo - a prince whose well rounded bodily form resembles a banyan tree
- saṅkho viya paṇḍaro ayanti saṅkhapaṇḍaro (something as white as a conch shell)

- satta vā aṭṭha vā māsā sattaṭṭhamāsā (seven or eight months)
- ekayojanaṁ vā dviyojanāni vā ekayojanadviyojanāni (one or two yojanas)

8. Disantarāḷattha Bahubbīhi

- antarāḷa: that which lies between
- disantarāḷa: that which lies between the principal directions (intermediate directions)
  - vidisā / anudisā
- expresses one of these intermediate directions
  - disantarāḷaṁ + attho yassa so disantarāḷattho (the compound that has the meaning of intermediate directions)

e.g.

- pubbassā ca dakkhiṇassā ca disāya yadantarāḷaṁ sāyaṁ pubbadakkhiṇā (the southeast direction, lying between the east and the south)
- pubbassā ca uttarassā ca disāya yadantarāḷaṁ sāyaṁ pubbuttarā (the northeast direction, lying between the east and the north)
  - pubbāya / pubbassā (f.)
- aparadakkhiṇā (the southwest direction)
- pacchimuttarā (the northwest direction)

9. Byatihāra-lakkhaṇa Bahubbīhi

    - Byatihāra: yuddha, yudha, saṅgāma, sampahāra
    - expresses the battle by its type / weapons
    - paṭhamā bahubbīhi
    - final vowel of the 1st term is lengthened
    - suffix -i is added at the end of the compound

    e.g.

    - kesesu ca kesesu ca gahetvā idaṁ yuddhaṁ pavattatīti kesākesi (yuddhaṁ) (a battle fought by seizing one another by the hair)
        - kesakesa > kesākesa > kesākesi
    - daṇḍehi ca daṇḍehi ca paharitvā idaṁ yuddhaṁ pavattatīti daṇḍādaṇḍi (yuddhaṁ) (a battle fought by striking one another with sticks)
        - daṇḍadaṇḍa > daṇḍādaṇḍa > daṇḍādaṇḍi

10. 5 Occurrances of Paṭhamā Bahubbīhi

    (a) Saha-pubbapada Bahubbīhi

    (b) Upamāna-pubbapada Bahubbīhi

    (c) Saṅkhyobhayapada Bahubbīhi

    (d) Disantarāḷattha Bahubbīhi

    (e) Byatihāra-lakkhaṇa Bahubbīhi

Various Substitutions Found in Compounds

Based on Nānādesa-rāsi (Niruttidīpanī)

1. Manogaṇika Words: as 1st member, final vowel -> -o
    - mano pubbaṅgamo etesanti manopubbaṅgamā (dhammā) (the dhammas of which the mind is the forerunner)
    - mano seṭṭho etesanti manoseṭṭhā (those of which the mind is supreme)

Taddhita – Meaning

- Tasmā tividhaliṅgato paraṃ hutvā hitā sahitāti taddhitā (rpsd): they are called taddhita because
  - they occur after and in connection with the three kinds of nominal bases
    - suddhanāma (primary nouns)
    - samāsanāma (compound nouns)
    - taddhitanāma (second derivative nouns)
    - notes: rarely also to
      - ākhyātas: ehipassiko (ehi passa ṇika)
      - nipātas:
      - sāhasikaṁ (ṇika)
      - ajjatana: something that happens today (ajja tana)
      - purātana: something that happened in the past (pura tana)
      - svātana: something that happens tomorrow (suve tana)
      - sanātana: something that happens forever (sanaṁ tana)

· cirantana: something that happens for long time (ciraṁ tana)

– Tasmā hitā taddhitā: pañcamītappurisasamāsa

∗ ta + hita = taddhita

· hita / sahitā / dhita: applied, placed (r/dhā)

· tasmā (from that): tividhaliṅgato

– The statement that taddhita suffixes occur after nouns describes the usual situation. In instances such as ehipassiko (the Dhamma that is worthy of the invitation "Come and see"), a taddhita suffix is also added to a verbal form. Particles are also treated as nouns in this context. Thus, in instances such as sāhasika (sahasā + ṇika, meaning "deed that is accidentally or forcefully done") and ajjatana (ajja + tana, meaning "that which happens today"), taddhita suffixes are added to particles as well. Accordingly, taddhita suffixes are added to nouns and particles and, occasionally, to verbal forms. No words formed by adding taddhita suffixes to prefixes are found

• Tesaṃ nāmikānaṃ hitā upakārakāti taddhitā (rpsd): called taddhita because they are beneficial or useful to those nominal bases

– Tesaṃ hitā taddhitā: catutthī/chaṭṭhī-tappurisasamāsa

primary denotation of the word taddhita: the taddhita suffixes such as ṇa ]

Paccaya – Meaning

[ Paṭicca etasmā attho etīti paccayo (rpsd): called paccaya because, depending on them, a meaning arises

• paccaya: kitakanāma (pati √i)

Usage

[ Main: to express concisely a meaning otherwise expressed in two or three words

- vasiṭṭhassa apaccaṃ vāsiṭṭho (Vasiṭṭha's child or a person belonging to his lineage)
- vinayaṃ adhīte venayiko (one who studies the vinaya; a person learned in the vinaya)
- guṇo assa atthi guṇavā (a virtuous person)
- alasassa bhāvo ālasyaṃ (the state of a lazy person; laziness)

Samāsa vs. Taddhita

- Samāsa: two or more nominal forms are combined
  - rañño puriso rājapuriso (the king's man; a royal servant)
- Taddhita: a nominal base and a suffix are combined
  - Vasiṭṭhassa apaccaṃ → Vāsiṭṭho (Vasiṭṭha + ṇa; Vasiṭṭha's child)
- Thus, in a compound, two or more words combine to form a single word, whereas in taddhita formation, a nominal base and a suffix combine to form a new nominal base.

Samāso padasaṅkhepo, padappaccayasaṃhitaṃ, Taddhitaṃ nāma hotevaṃ, viññeyyaṃ tesamantaraṃ (rpsd) A compound is a word in which words have been combined and condensed. A taddhita is a word in which a word and a suffix have been combined. Their difference should be understood in this way ]

How Taddhita Words Are Formed

- Meaning: Vasiṭṭhassa apaccaṃ / putto (Vasiṭṭha's child)
  - Vasiṭṭha: person named Vasiṭṭha

    - ṇa: apaccaṁ (son)
- vasiṭṭhassa apaccaṃ > vasiṭṭhassa + ṇa
- vibhattipaccayas are dropped
    - vasiṭṭha + ṇa
- ṇ is applied and elided
    - ṇ: anubhanda (vuḍḍhi of the initial vowel); indicatory letter
    - vāsiṭṭha + a
        * sometimes, vāseṭṭha (medial vowel i > e)
- base + suffix = taddhita base
    - vāsiṭṭha
- vibhattipaccaya is added for it to be used
    - vāsiṭṭha + si = vāsiṭṭho, etc.
- noun is declined

Anubandha (Ṇ)

- does not become part of the final form of the word
- after the suffix has been applied, this indicatory ṇ is elided. The letter is called an anubandha (indicatory letter) because it is attached closely to the suffix
- ṇa → ṇ + a
- ṇika → ṇ + ika
- ṇeyya → ṇ + eyya
- ṇava → ṇ + ava
- ṇera → ṇ + era

The indicatory ṇ is attached to a suffix to show that vuddhi is to take place in the base. 3 Apaccaṃ is a neuter word bearing the meaning “son.” ]

Vuddhi

[ Vuddhi: strengthening

- a > ā
- i, ī > e
- u, ū > o

e.g.,

- vasiṭṭha + ṇa > vāsiṭṭho (Vasiṭṭha's child or a person belonging to his lineage)
- vinaya + ṇika > venayiko (one who has studied the Vinaya; a person learned in the Vinaya)
- uḷumpa + ṇika > oḷumpiko (one who crosses by raft)

vuddhi doesn't happen

- if followed by a conjunct
  - kacca + ṇāyana > kaccāyano (Kacca's child or a person belonging to Kacca's lineage)
- if the base begins with ā, e, or o
  - bhāradvāja + ṇa > bhāradvājo (Bhāradvāja's child or a person belonging to Bhāradvāja's lineage)
  - vesāmitta + ṇa > vesāmitto (Vesāmitta's child or a person belonging to Vesāmitta's lineage)
  - gotama + ṇa > gotamo (Gotama's child or a person belonging to Gotama's lineage)

3 Vidhis of Vuddhi

- niccavidhi (mandatory arrangement): vuddhi necessarily takes place
  - e.g. Vāsiṭṭho
- aniccavidhi (optional arrangement): vuddhi takes place optionally
  - e.g. oḷumpiko / uḷumpiko (one who crosses by raft)
- asantavidhi (non-arrangement): vuddhi does not take place
  - e.g.
    - nīlaṃ (something blue)
    - pītaṃ (something yellow)

Vāsiṭṭhādīsu niccā'yaṃ, anicco'ḷumpikādisu; Na vuddhi nīlapītādo, vavatthitavibhāsato (rpsd) This vuddhi is obligatory in words such as Vāsiṭṭha, optional in instances such as oḷumpika, and absent in words such as nīla and pīta. This is due to vavatthita-vibhāsā: that is, the instances in which vuddhi does or does not occur are systematically determined within the grammar ]

Gender

- all three genders
- determined by the referent that it denotes or qualifies
  - vāsiṭṭho puriso (a man belonging to vasiṭṭha's lineage)
  - vāsiṭṭhī kaññā (a young woman belonging to vasiṭṭha's lineage)
  - vāsiṭṭhaṃ apaccaṃ (a child belonging to vasiṭṭha's lineage)
    - words formed with certain suffixes, however, occur only in a prescribed gender. For example, abstract nouns such as lahutā and mudutā, formed with the suffix tā, are always feminine. Special points concerning gender will be explained under the respective suffixes

3/6 Types

- sāmañña taddhita (general taddhita)
  - apacca (descendant): meaning: someone's child or a person belonging to someone's lineage
    - e.g. vāsiṭṭho
  - anekattha (miscellaneous meanings): meanings: various
    - being mixed with something
    - having studied something
      - e.g. venayiko (vinaya + ṇika)
    - being made from something
    - being born in a particular place
  - assatthi (possession): meaning: the possession of something
    - e.g. guṇavā (guṇa + vantu)
  - saṅkhyā (number): meaning: numbers
    - e.g. pañcamo (pañca + ma)
- bhava taddhita (abstract taddhita): meaning: the state or quality of being
  - e.g. ālasyaṃ (alasa + ṇya; the state of a lazy person; laziness)
- abyaya taddhita (indeclinable taddhita): forms taddhita words regarded as indeclinable particles
  - e.g.
    - dvikkhattuṃ (dvi + kkhattuṃ; twice)
    - dvidhā (dvi + dhā; in two ways)
    - yathā (ya + thā; in a certain manner; as) sāmaññavuttibhāvatthā, byayato taddhitaṃ tidhā, tassādi catudhā'paccā'nekattha'ssatthisaṅkhyāto (rpsd) Taddhita is threefold: general-function taddhita, abstract taddhita, and indeclinable taddhita. The first of these, general-function taddhita, is fourfold: descendant, miscellaneous meanings, possession, and number. ]

Apacca Taddhita

Meaning

[ Apaccaṃ (nt.; na √pat ṇya): son, child, descendent, offspring of

- narake na patanti etenāti apaccaṁ (one by whom the parents do not fall into hell)
  - note: so called maybe because of beliefs in rituals that only sons can do to save parents from going to hell after death
- na patati vicchindati vaṁso etenāti (one by whom the lineage is not interrupted)

Apaccataddhitapaccaya: taddhita suffix used to denote a person's child (mainly), grandchild, or descendents ("child / descendent of so-and-so") ]

Viggaha

- Word denoting the father or founder of the lineage (mostly proper nouns) in chaṭṭhīvibhatti

-ṇi

[ The suffix ṇi is added in the apacca sense to certain stems ending in a. Dakkhassa apaccaṃ Dakkhi (the child or descendant of the sage named Dakkha) Dakkha + ṇi => Dakkha + i => Dakkhi Because this is a stem ending in i, it is declined like aggi, with forms such as Dakkhi, Dakkhī, and Dakkhayo. Further Examples • Sakyaputti - the child, that is, a follower, of the Blessed One, who was the son of the Sakyan king • Nāṭaputti/nāthaputti - the child, that is, a follower, of Nāṭaputta • Suddhodani - Prince Siddhattha, the child of Suddhodana • Jenadatti - the child of Jinadatta • Anuruddhi - the child of Anuruddha (this is an example in which vuddhi has not occurred)9

1. The Suffix ṇika

The suffix ṇika is added to certain words in the apacca sense. Sakyaputtassa putto Sakyaputtiko (the son of the Blessed One, who was the son of the Sakyan king) The final k is also replaced by y, producing the alternative form Sakyaputtiyo. Further Examples • Nāṭaputtiko - the son of Nāṭaputta • Jenadattiko - the son of Jinadatta • Vimātuyā putto Vemātiko - the child of a different mother; a half-brother

-ṇya

The suffix ṇya is applied in the apacca sense to certain words such as Aditi. Aditiyā putto Ādicco (the sun-god, the son of the goddess Aditi) Derivation:

1. Aditi + ṇya

9Further examples: Vāsavi (the child of Vāsava, that is, Sakka); Dāsaputti (the child of Dāsaputta); Dāsarathi (the child of Dasaratha); Vāruṇi (the child of Varuṇa); Doṇi (the child of Doṇa); Kaṇḍi (the child of Kaṇḍa); Bāladevi (the child of Baladeva); Pāvaki (the child of Pāvaka).

1. The indicatory letter ṇ is elided.
2. The initial vowel a undergoes vuddhi and becomes ā.
3. When the suffix y follows, the final vowel i of the base is elided.
4. The consonant cluster ty changes to cc.
5. Āditya => Ādicca

In brief: Aditi + ṇya => Āditi + ya => Ādit + ya => Āditya => Ādicca Grammatical rule: When the taddhita suffix y follows, the final vowel of the base is elided.

Further Examples • Ditiyā putto Decco (An asura that is a son of the asura mother named Diti) • Kuṇḍaniyā putto Koṇḍañño (the son of Kuṇḍanī) o Despite being followed by a saṃyoga, the initial vowel u undergoes vuddhi and becomes o. o The final vowel i is elided. o The cluster ny changes to ññ. o Kuṇḍani + ṇya => Koṇḍanya => Koṇḍañña • Kuruno putto Korabyo (the son or descendant of Kuru)

o The vowel u undergoes vuddhi and becomes o. o av is substituted for the vowel u of the consonant r. o The consonant cluster vy changes to by. o Kuru + ṇya => Koravya => Korabya • Bhātuno putto Bhātabyo (one's brother's son; nephew) o Here too, av is substituted for the vowel u of the consonant t, and vy changes to by: Bhātu + ṇya => Bhātavya => Bhātabya.

-ṇava

The suffix ṇava is applied in the apacca sense to names ending in u, such as Upagu and Manu. Upagussa apaccaṃ Opagavo (the child or descendant of Upagu) Upagu + ṇava => Opagu + ava => Opagava Further Examples • Mānavo - a child of the king Manu or a person belonging to Manu's lineage; a human being • Bhaggavo - the child or descendant of Bhaggu • Paṇḍavo - the child or descendant of Paṇḍu • Opavindavo - the child or descendant of Upavindu Mānuso is also an apacca-taddhita form derived from the word Manu. However, the suffix used in it is not ṇava but ṇa. In addition, a consonant s is inserted: Manu + ṇa => Mānu + a => Mānu + s + a => Mānusa.

-ṇera

The suffix ṇera is applied in the apacca sense to words such as vidhavā. • Vidhavāya10 apaccaṃ Vedhavero (the son of a widow) o Derivation: Vidhavā + ṇera => Vedhavera • Bandhukiyā abhisāriṇiyā putto Bandhukero (the son of a prostitute) • Samaṇassa upajjhāyassa putto puttaṭṭhāniyattā Sāmaṇero (the novice who is the son of the monk who is his preceptor)11 • Samaṇiyā pavattiniyā apaccaṃ Sāmaṇerī (the female novice who is the child of her pavattinī)12 • Nāḷikāya apaccaṃ Nāḷikero (the son of a woman named Nāḷikā)

-tara, -tama, -isika, -iya, and -iṭṭha

Visese taratamisikiyiṭṭhā (Kcyn)

Visesa Taddhita: taddhita suffixes used to indicate a greater or more distinctive quality within a group greater or more distinctive than that of the others

- Rūpasiddhi: considers it a separate class
- most common are tara and tama

Distinctive or Comparative sense: ”more than”, ”the most”

- sabbe ime pāpā, ayaṃ imesaṃ visesena pāpoti pāpataro (all these are wicked; this person is more wicked than they are) (pāpa + tara)
    - short version:
        - visesena pāpo pāpataro (a more wicked person) (pāpa + tara)
        - visesena pāpo pāpatamo (a more wicked person) (pāpa + tama)
        - visesena pāpo pāpisiko (a more wicked person) (pāpa + isika)
        - visesena pāpo pāpiyo (a more wicked person) (pāpa + iya)
        - visesena pāpo pāpiṭṭho (a more wicked person) (pāpa + iṭṭha)
- visesena garu garutaro/garutamo (more/most venerable) (garu + tara/tama)
- visesena paṭu paṭutaro/paṭutamo (more/most skilled) (paṭu + tara/tama)
- varataro/varatamo (more/most excellent) (vara + tara/tama)
- paṇītataro/paṇītatamo (more/most refined) (paṇīta + tara/tama)

1. Double Suffix

   Shows an exceptionally high degree of something

   - pāpiṭṭhataro (even more wicked; most exceedingly wicked) (pāpa + iṭṭha > pāpiṭṭha + tara)

2. Special substitutions before iya and iṭṭha

   With vuḍḍha, pasattha, antika, bāḷha, appa, or yuva: a special substitute replaces the original base

|---|---|
| vuḍḍha | ja |
| pasattha | sa |
| antika | neda |
| bāḷha | sādha |
| appa | kaṇ |
| yuva | kan |

   - vuḍḍha + iya → jeyyo, "older"; vuḍḍha + iṭṭha → jeṭṭho (oldest, senior) 17
   - pasattha (praiseworthy, excellent) takes sa: pasattha + iya → seyyo, pasattha + iṭṭha

   → seṭṭho, "better, more excellent."18

   - antika (near) takes neda: antika + iya → nediyo, "nearer."
   - bāḷha (strong, intense) takes sādha: bāḷha + iya → sādhiyo, "stronger, more intense."

   17 Ja + iya. After the preceding vowel is elided, the following vowel undergoes strengthening, and the consonant y is doubled: j + eya → j + eyya → jeyya

   18 Kaccāyana states that the base pasattha may also be replaced by ja, producing the forms jeyyo and jeṭṭho in the sense of "more excellent" or "most excellent."

   - appa takes kaṇ: appa + iya/iṭṭha → kaṇiyo/kaṇiṭṭho, "smaller/smallest."
   - yuva takes kan: yuva + iya/iṭṭha → kaniyo/kaniṭṭho, "younger/youngest."

    - technically, it becomes kaṇ and then kan

3. Elision of vantu, mantu, and vī

   With the possessive vantu, mantu, or vī: the original suffix is elided

   - guṇavantu + iya → guṇiyo (more virtuous)
   - guṇavantu + iṭṭha → guṇiṭṭho (more virtuous)
   - satimantu + iya → satiyo (more mindful)
   - satimantu + iṭṭha → satiṭṭho (more mindful)
   - medhāvī + iya → medhiyo (wiser)
   - medhāvī + iṭṭha → medhiṭṭho (wiser)
