- When it expresses a result or consequence: can be followed by a clause without modal verbs

– Examples:

- * The door was left ajar so that the cat walked right in. (Result)
- * The agreement was structured so that each party received fair compensation. (Factual outcome)
- * He explained it simply so that everyone understood the concept. (Result of his explanation)

- When it expresses a specific intended purpose (why something is done) or possibility: mostly followed by a clause with modal verbs

– Examples:

- * She studied hard so that she could pass the exam. (Intended purpose/possibility)
- * He spoke quietly so that he wouldn’t disturb the others. (Intended purpose/avoidance)
